

The cost of cable has gotten out of control. Not to mention that in the market I live in, Comcast has a MONOPOLY (Isn't that illegal in our country???) .

I am forced to purchase stations that show religious content 24-hours a day, I'm forced to purchase and scroll through music channels that I want nothing to do with.

In this day of technology why isn't there a broader choice of services available from the cable industry (Comcast in my case), rather than having a package of goods shoved down your throat?
